Curator’s Corner

Dear Friends of the Garden,

This past May, Jesús Reyes, our General Director, and I had the pleasure of attending the Chelsea Flower Show while in London pursuing the goal of connecting the Vallarta Botanical Garden with philanthropic support organizations and individuals in the United Kingdom. The Chelsea Flower Show, the signature annual event of the Royal Horticultural Society, is perhaps the most famous flower and garden show in the world and has been steadily growing its enormous base of support and massive audience for over a hundred years. Displays at this show run a broad array of different themes, designs, and selections but a central connection to each is a determined pursuit of excellence and a desire to connect people to celebrate the benefits of plants and beauty in our lives.

The Vallarta Botanical Garden is also hard at work in pursuing its determined path to excellence. As horticulturalists creating living works of art, we continually reimagine our landscapes and displays for an ever-changing visitor experience to delights our guests and members. I hope you enjoy the photos from the Chelsea Flower Show that I’ve included in this edition of The Leaflet. As always, I thank the Vallarta Botanical Gardens family of supporters for allowing us to pursue horticultural excellence here in Western Mexico.

Warmest regards,
Bob Price, Founder and Curator, VBG

Between 2001 and 2003 a group of scientists researched the number of plants that were sold in the markets located in the center of Veracruz. This study registered the informal trade of different epiphyte plant species, such as bromeliads, ferns and particularly orchids. Some of these species were not native to Veracruz, but were brought from other parts of the country. Among them, was our orchid of the month, Encyclia spatella, which is originally from the west coast of Jalisco and Colima.

We are talking about a tiny brown flower with a soft apple-like perfume smell. Like other epiphyte species, it’s found attached to the trees, where it blossoms from June to August, with a big inflorescence of one-meter long.

According to this research in Veracruz markets, the illegal trade of plants, just in this state, is equal to the total legal exportations of orchids from Mexico. It’s also similar to the volume of all cacti confiscated in Mexico, United States, Germany and France airports together.

National laws protect only 4% of Mexico’s total flora, and exclude species like Encyclia spatella. These are some of the reasons why epiphyte plants have the highest extinction and eradication rates.

The problem is complex and stems largely from limited employment opportunities and insufficient awareness regarding the impact of illicit trade of our precious natural resources.

Come to the Vallarta Botanical Garden to meet Encyclia spatella, and help us spread the word that biodiversity conservation is a task for us all.

It’s hard to believe… but some of Mexico’s largest, most majestic and ecologically important trees—including strangler figs (genus Ficus sp.)—start their lives in the gullet of one of the country’s tiniest birds, the Scrub Euphonia. This process usually takes place in the high forest canopy, unseen, except by the most observant humans strolling below.

Flocks of these delightful, bumblebee-colored birds, descend to flit and feed on fruiting trees and shrubs—especially climbing figs and mistletoes—lured by the sweet-tasting fruit, which is later “deposited” on a branch in the forest canopy.

It’s a matter of Russian Roulette, but some of the undigested seeds within the fruit, affixed by a sticky resin, will eventually germinate and start a process whereby one tiny seedling may kill (they literally smother, or “strangle” their woody hosts to death) and envelope an entire tree, then add insult to injury by using its matrix like a wooden skeleton, to support their eventual gargantuan bulk!

Euphonia is a New Latin word, meaning “clear-voiced”. And although I often say, “never trust a bird name to accurately describe most birds”, this time around, the committee that named this group did get it right! However, they didn’t get the bird’s origins right until quite recently! Sure enough, the euphonias initially mystified ornithologists as to their place in the avian family tree, even if they captured birders attention with their striking colors. Up until quite recently, however, they, and their congener, the Chlorophonias, were thought to be specialized, extremely small tanagers, and placed in the family Thraupidae.

That mystery has been partially solved using the process of electrophoresis, so the entire lineage has been moved to the Family Fringillidae, which includes finches, crossbills, siskins, goldfinches, and even Hawaiian Honeycreepers.

Scrub Euphonias are one of two local euphonia species, and the one most likely to be seen at lowland and foothill localities. The Vallarta Botanical Garden is at the upper elevational extent of the species range in the Vallarta region, even though they are strictly Neotropical and range from northern Mexico to Costa Rica. There are two distinct populations of Scrub Euphonia, one that occurs throughout the Gulf and Caribbean slopes, spilling out onto the south Pacific coast of Mexico into Central America, and another isolated population restricted to the Mexican States of Sinaloa, Nayarit, Jalisco, Colima and Michoacan.

The latter, which is sometimes considered specifically distinct, was described in 1889 and is known as “Goldman’s Euphonia”, Euphonia affinis goldmani.
Veiled Lady visits the Vallarta Botanical Garden

The summer rainy season brings a constant parade of wondrous delights to the Vallarta Botanical Garden and our surrounding forests. One of the more incredible-looking miniature marvels available to the lucky and observant are “veiled lady” mushrooms (Phallus industiatus). Below this mushroom’s cap (which has a form somewhat reminiscent of a morel) hangs a spore-laden indusium resembling a lacy skirt. This species is found in tropical regions throughout much of the world, including Asia where it is sold for top dollar in markets as a delicacy.

Mycology, the study of fungi, is a distinct discipline from botany, the study of plants, and the two are totally separate biological kingdoms. Mushrooms are the aboveground fruiting bodies of fungus whose mycelia (vegetative bodies) thrive in decaying wood and soil rich in organic matter. Finding a fascinating mushroom in the forest can be the highlight of a hike, but we recommend resisting the temptation to eat them unless you go with a mushroom identification expert and learn how to properly harvest and prepare them. While some species are edible and even medicinal, others have powerful toxins that can be quite harmful to humans. As with any study of our natural world though, careful observation heightens our appreciation and enjoyment of our planet.
Give Every Month – Become a Garden “GEM”

Dividing your contributions to the Vallarta Botanical Garden into monthly payments can help you better budget your annual giving and allows us a dependable monthly income to carry the Garden through the slower times of the year. A new Give Every Month “GEM” page is now up on the Garden’s website www.vbgardens.org for you to begin this kind of contribution today.

Commemorative Cantera Benches

Would you like to honor or memorialize someone with a permanent cantera bench at the Vallarta Botanical Garden? Benches are finished with beautiful hand-painted ceramic tiles. We can help you create a custom design with text and images of your choice. Prices are at $7,000 USD for a Banca Real (Regal Bench) and $5,000 USD for a Banca Distintiva (Distinctive Bench). Dividing this up into payments over the course of three years is a commitment of only $194 or $139 USD per month. These gifts qualify for tax-deductible contributions in Mexico, the US, and Canada. Interested? Great! Please visit our website or call 322 223 6182 and ask to speak to the Garden’s Membership Coordinator, Michaela Flores.

Your Legacy Lives on at the VBG

A member of the Garden’s Legacy Committee would be happy to talk to you about the best options for optimizing your philanthropic potential and further blessing a community. Please write to info@vbgardens.org.
Cactus and Succulent Plant Project
Groundbreaking has begun

Mexico leads the world in cactus and agave diversity and is home to a wealth of other succulents. Our state of Jalisco is home to a vast number of these incredible plants. Upon successful completion of the Cactus and Succulent Plant Project, we’ll cultivate these plants to their full potential to create inspirational displays for our visitors to enjoy.

In late 2016 the Vallarta Botanical Garden received a grant of $15,000 USD from the Stanely Smith Horticultural Trust (SSHT) to begin this project. Since then, the scope and grandeur of the project have grown with our vision for what we can do in this area.

We would like to invite you to join us as one of the first visionary contributors towards the Cactus and Succulent Plant Project. Your tax-deductible gift will create a legacy of cactus and succulent plant cultivation and display at the Vallarta Botanical Garden. Together we will also create a powerful new attraction for our visitors.
Do you have a special flower that you feel connected to when you visit the Vallarta Botanical Garden?

Education and Volunteer Report
By Marcos Gómez, Propagation Coordinator, VBG

June was a busy month for us as we received a large number of school students from all grade levels. As this was the last month of school before summer vacation, many visits to the Garden were reserved to complement classroom learning. We covered an assortment of different topics from plant propagation to sustainable tourism.

We also offered a series of hummingbird tours at the Garden in conjunction with the Puerto Vallarta International Hummingbird Festival. These tours, which meet at the Visitor Center at 1 pm, are offered daily until the end of July.

From the Memberships Desk

The seasonal rains have returned to our forests triggering the sequences of events that collectively define our summer. Trees leaf out so thoroughly that the forest floor is eclipsed in shade, plants provide their greatest bounties of fruit, and butterflies and other insects multiply and fill the landscape with astounding abundance. As the forest relies on a steady supply of summer rain to thrive and produce to its full potential, we at the Vallarta Botanical Garden rely on the generous support of our members to flourish and continue developing our horticultural vision for the good of our community and visitors. We thank you, our members, for nourishing the work that we do through your committed contributions.

Members: please always wear your membership card when visiting the Garden. This helps our staff and volunteers recognize you as members and offer valuable discounts on your Garden purchases and other important benefits.

Can you find your name on our Wall of Patrons?

If you’re not yet “on the wall” we invite you to join the family that preserves the Garden forever!
